program for the evening consisted of a recitation of one of Riley's poems by Miss Ruth Hamilton, a duet by Dr. S. G. Valentine and his daughter Mrs. Roy T. Brumbaugh and an article by Hon. D. P. McPherson on "The April Dates in American History."

At the business session the routine business was transacted and Mrs. L. Dow Ott asked the Playground Committee if they had any report to make and the information was given that a number of sites had been looked over, but nearly all were objectionable as too much on one side of the town or near the railroads. That the owners of site more centrally located than the others had been asked to name a price and that it was hoped that progress would be made with matter at an early date.

At the close of the program the Entertainment Committee took charge of the meeting, serving ice cream and cake and many declared the evening to have been the most enjoyable the association had yet had.

After the meeting was over the entertainment committee found a quantity of ice cream and cake on their hands, which they sold and after paying all expenses had a balance of $5.00 in their hands, and this sum they have put aside with which to start a playground fund and are discussing ways and plans to make such a fund grow.

Buehler to a COMPILER man who dropped into his store, "but I am glad to sell Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia on that basis."

"I am still selling the specific at half-price, although I cannot tell how long I shall be able to do so, and anyone who is subject to constipation, sick headache, dizziness, liver trouble, indigestion or a general played out condition, ought to take advantage of this chance. Resolutions.

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father in His alwise Providence has called home to his reward our neighbor and fellow worker, W. C. Sheely, a faithful and esteemed member of Camp No. 7263, Modern Woodmen of America.

Whereas, We the members of this Camp desire to express in this little tribute of loving remembrance our high esteem and respect for our neighbor whose death we have so keenly felt, be it therefore

Resolved, That Gettysburg Camp No. 7263, M. W. of A. through the death of William Clarence Sheely has lost a most influential and respected member whose loss we sincerely mourn and that although he has been called in the very height of a most successful and useful business career to "come up higher," his memory and influence for good among us will be lovingly cherished by this Camp.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our warmest and most sincere sympathy and commend them to the tender love of Him who "doeth all things" to trust him to sustain and comfort them in this hour of sore affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded on the minutes of the Camp, that a copy be sent the bereaved family and that they be published in the town papers.

GETTYSBURG, PA.

PENNSYLVANIA DEMOCRACY

LETTER OF STATE CHAIRMAN
GUTHRIE-ON REORGANIZATION.Pointing the Way to Needed Changes
in Rules to Make Democracy a
Power in the State.

Democratic State Chairman Geo. W. Guthrie has addressed the following letter to members of the State Central Committee and through them to the Democracy of the State.

You have no doubt received from the Special Committee notice of my election by it as Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and of my acceptance.

I have appointed James J. Blakeslee, Esq., Secretary, who has agreed to act without any salary and will give his time to the full performance of the duties of that office. Mr. Blakeslee will, as rapidly as possible, put himself in communication either in person or by letter with the members of the Committee and the officers of the various local organizations, and with active Democrats in the various districts. I have also appointed Warren Van Dyke, Esq., Resident Secretary, who will take charge of the Headquarters.

To enable the party to carry on its work and meet the proper and necessary expenses, without being dependent on large contributions from one or two men who claim as a return the right to dictate its actions, the Reorganization Committee has been continued and will undertake at once the duty imposed upon it of raising the necessary amount by small contributions from any who are willing to give to the cause.

I am glad to inform you that they have strong assurances that their appeals will be favorably responded to and that the party will be placed in a position of independence and self-respect.

While it is the intention of the officers to keep in close touch with the members of the State Central Committee and the members of the party in every section of the State so as to be ready and able to aid the local organizations when possible, I again assure you that there will be no attempt to interfere with them or to commit the party in advance to any course of action. The selection of policies and candidates belongs not to the organization, but to the party and must be left to the free will of its members, untrammelled by dictation from any source.

I believe that one great cause of dissatisfaction in the past has been the feeling that party action instead of reflecting the free choice of its members, simply registered the arbitrary decisions of self-constituted leaders, who determined in advance the policies to be adopted and candidates to be nominated. This practice must no longer prevail. In order to restore confidence and to reunite the party, its members must be satisfied that not the will of any man or faction, but the collected will of all will prevail in controlling the party's action.

In order to make the party more promptly and surely responsive to the will of its members and also to meet recent changes in the election laws of the State, some changes in our party rules are necessary.

For these purposes I would suggest for your consideration the following as the most pressing:

1st. As far as possible the rules governing the election of members of the State Central Committee should be uniform and in accordance with the policy underlying the primary election law. So long as radical differences remain, entire equality cannot exist.

2nd. Whenever a Congressional District is composed of two or more counties, there should be a chairman for such district, to be selected either by direct vote at the primaries, or by the Congressional Candidate in conjunction with the chairman of the counties comprising the district. Such District Chairman should have charge of the congressional campaign in such district.

3rd. The State Chairman shall enter upon the discharge of his duties immediately after his election and shall serve only until his successor has been elected. In any year when a state convention is held, he shall not be elected until after such convention, and the nominees thereof shall have a voice and vote in the selection.

Under the present system as you know the new Chairman, although elected in July, does not take office until the January following, and therefore has nothing to do with the campaign following his election. This is manifestly unfair.

Every individual man should admit that when the people, through primaries and conventions, have selected new committees and new candidates, and have perhaps adopted new policies to meet new issues, the new committee men coming fresh from the people, should be able to select as their chairman one who they know is in entire sympathy with them, and in whom they and the candidates will have entire confidence. Sometimes they might re-elect the old chairman, but on the other hand, it might happen again as it has before, that the old chairman represented influences to which they were opposed and from which the party desired to be free; yet under the present rule, they would be obliged to accept him as their leader in the campaign on which they were entering.

No supposed convenience can justify such a system. Its only real purpose is to provide a device for perpetuating the control of a faction even though the people should elect a convention hostile to it.

4th. The State Chairman, the Chairman of the Convention, and the candidates nominated at it should have authority to appoint an advisory committee to supervise the State campaign.

This was the system which prevailed when the Democratic party was a vital and growing force in the State.

It will give to the people through the convention a more direct connection with an control over the State campaign, as the majority in the convention will be able to inject its own spirit and purposes into the campaign.

These suggestions are made for your consideration; they are intended to restore confidence and increase the liberty of party action. I will be glad to hear from you on these or any other points which you think should be considered.

Of course, all such suggestions must be of any avail, be submitted to and approved by the full committee, the State Convention, and the party.

There are other provisions in the rules which should be changed in order to increase the control of the party over the organization; it is also probable that if the so-called "Tustin Act" goes into effect, still other changes will be necessary to comply with its provisions.

In ample time for your consideration and action, attention will be called to these points.

I am, very truly yours,
GEO. W. GUTHRIE,
Chairman.

Real Estate is a Real Investment

Real Estate is the safest investment that exists---it can't fail---it can't abscond---it can't make default---it can't float.

Real Estate in fact is not a risk, it is real and tangible and always has a definite value.

PENNSYLVANIA DEMOCRACY

LETTER OF STATE CHAIRMAN
GUTHRIE ON REORGANIZATION.Pointing the Way to Needed Changes
in Rules to Make Democracy a
Power in the State.

Democratic State Chairman Geo. W. Guthrie has addressed the following letter to members of the State Central Committee and through them to the Democracy of the State.

You have no doubt received from the Special Committee notice of my election by it as Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and of my acceptance.

I have appointed James I. Blakeslee, Esq., Secretary, who has agreed to act without any salary and will give his time to the full performance of the duties of that office. Mr. Blakeslee will, as rapidly as possible, put himself in communication either in person or by letter with the members of the Committee and the officers of the various local organizations, and with active Democrats in the various districts. I have also appointed Warren Van Dyke, Esq., Resident Secretary, who will take charge of the Headquarters.

To enable the party to carry on its work and meet the proper and necessary expenses, without being dependent on large contributions from one or two men who claim as a return the right to dictate its actions, the Reorganization Committee has been continued and will undertake at once the duty imposed upon it of raising the necessary amount by small contributions from any who are willing to give to the cause.

I am glad to inform you that they have strong assurances that their appeals will be favorably responded to, and that the party will be placed in a position of independence and self-respect.

While it is the intention of the officers to keep in close touch with the members of the State Central Committee and the members of the party in every section of the State so as to be ready and able to aid the local organizations when possible, I again assure you that there will be no attempt to interfere with them or to commit the party in advance to any course of action. The selection of policies and candidates belongs not to the organization, but to the party and must be left to the free will of its members, untrammelled by dictation from any source.

I believe that one great cause of dissatisfaction in the past has been the feeling that party action instead of reflecting the free choice of its members, simply registered the arbitrary decisions of self-constituted leaders, who determined in advance the policies to be adopted and candidates to be nominated. This practice must no longer prevail. In order to restore confidence and to reunite the party, its members must be satisfied that not the will of any man or faction, but the collected will of all will prevail in controlling the party's action.

In order to make the party more promptly and surely responsive to the will of its members and also to meet recent changes in the election laws of the State, some changes in our party rules are necessary.

For these purposes I would suggest for your consideration the following as the most pressing:

1st. As far as possible the rules governing the election of members of the State Central Committee should be uniform and in accordance with the policy underlying the primary election law. So long as radical differences between the different counties remain, entire equality cannot exist.

2nd. Whenever a Congressional District is composed of two or more counties, there should be a chairman for such district, to be selected either by direct vote at the primaries, or by the Congressional Candidate in conjunction with the chairman of the counties comprising the district. Such District Chairman should have charge of the congressional campaign in such district.

3rd. The State Chairman shall enter upon the discharge of his duties immediately after his election and shall serve only until his successor has been elected. In any year when a state convention is held, he shall not be elected until after such convention, and the nominees thereof shall have a voice and vote in the selection.

Under the present system, as you know the new Chairman, although elected in July, does not take office until the January following, and therefore has nothing to do with the campaign following his election. This is manifestly unfair.

Every fair-minded man should admit that when the people, through primaries and conventions, have selected new committees and new candidates, and have perhaps adopted new policies to meet new issues, the new committeemen coming fresh from the people, should be able to select as their chairman one who they know is in entire sympathy with them, and in whom they and the candidates will have entire confidence. Sometimes they might re-elect the old chairman, but on the other hand, it might happen again as it has before, that the old chairman represented influences to which they were opposed and from which the party desired to be free; yet under the present rule, they would be obliged to accept him as their leader in the campaign on which they were entering.

No supposed convenience can justify such a system. Its only real purpose is to provide a device for perpetuating the control of a faction even though the people should elect a convention hostile to it.

4th. The State Chairman, the Chairman of the Convention, and the candidates nominated at it, should have authority to appoint an advisory committee to supervise the State campaign.

This was the system which prevailed when the Democratic party was a vital and growing force in the State.

It will give to the people through the convention a more direct connection with an control over the State campaign, as the majority in the convention will be able to inject its own spirit and purposes into the campaign.

These suggestions are made for your consideration; they are intended to restore confidence and increase the liberty of party action. I will be glad to hear from you on these or any other points which you think should be considered.

Of course, all such suggestions must be of any avail, be submitted to and approved by the full committee, the State Convention, and the party.

There are other provisions in the rules which should be changed in order to increase the control of the party over the organization; it is also probable that if the so-called "Trust Act" goes into effect, still other changes will be necessary to comply with its provisions.

In ample time for your consideration and action, attention will be called to these points.

I am, very truly yours,
GEO. W. GUTHRIE,
Chairman.

The STONE FIREPLACE

By TEMPLE BAILEY

(Copyrighted, 1908, by Homer Sprague.)

As far as the eye could see stretched the limitless expanse of snow. Miss Frazier, pacing from window to window of her little cottage, felt imprisoned.

"Oh, pussy cat, pussy cat," she said to the cat curled up on the window seat, "I shall die of loneliness."

The cat gave sleepy attention, and Miss Frazier shook her gently. "Of course you don't care," she said, "but who could have believed that snow and cold weather would have come so early! And all the other cottagers have gone back to town. But I can't. My rent is paid for six months, and I can't afford to lose it."

Once more she began her excited walk across the floor, while the cat went to sleep, and deadly quiet reigned. At last Miss Frazier could stand it no longer. She put on her hat and coat and a pair of rubbers. Pausing on the threshold as she went out, she addressed the cat theatrically.

"Sleep on," she said. "I go to seek my fortune." And she floundered through the snow to the gate.

The road, deep with drifts, offered new discouragements. Miss Frazier's long skirts dragged and grew heavy, and at last she stopped and sobbed aloud, "I can't go on!"

Help came in the person of a little man in high boots, who appeared from the other side of the drift.

"Got stuck, did ye?" he asked cheerily. "Well, you ought ter stayed at home. 'Tain't weather fer wimmin to be out."

Miss Frazier looked at him haughtily. In her code there was no place for bad grammar, and besides, as a spinster of spirit, his reproach grated on her. "Women can't stay in and die of loneliness," she told him stiffly.

The little man looked at her with sympathetic gray eyes. "Lonesome was ye?" he said. "Well, now, that's too bad."

His sympathy warmed the cockles of Miss Frazier's heart. It was so long since any one had cared. The last of her family, she had taught school in a big city until ill health had forced her to resign. Then she had rented the little cottage at the unfashionable resort and had prepared to live there for six months, hoping for the benefits of fresh air and a free life. There had been other cottagers near, but they had their own interests, so that even in the warmer months Miss Frazier had been lonely, and now that snow had come her situation seemed unbearable.

There were tears in her eyes as she stood there, forlorn and cold in the drift, and the little man said again: "Well, now, that's too bad. You'd better git into the house. You'll ketch cold."

"I hate the house," said Miss Frazier fiercely. "There isn't a soul there but the pussy cat."

"I live up at the farm," he informed her. "I'm the new manager, and there ain't nobody there but a lot of men and a colored woman to cook for us. There's a good deal of work, you know."

Miss Frazier didn't know, but she found herself listening eagerly to his talk of Guernsey cattle and of blue ribbon horses, with all the rest of the homely farm details.

The little man helped her up the path and landed her on her own doorstep safely. In spite of the biting air he jerked his cap off as he bade her goodbye.

"Come in," she urged. "Oh, please come in. I don't think I can stand it to face the pussy cat all alone."

His kindly blue eyes smiled at her. "I'd like to come," he said. "'Tain't very sociable up at the farm."

The little room was cheerless enough. Miss Frazier's ginger jars and Mexican hats had been artistic summer accessories, but in the gray light of the snowy day they merely served to emphasize the bleakness. In the stone fireplace was a bunch of goldenrod gone to seed. The only warmth came feebly from a rickety stove in the summer kitchen.

"Why ain't you got a fire in the fireplace?" the little man demanded as he surveyed the cavernous structure.

"I haven't any wood," shivered Miss Frazier. "I—I couldn't get any."

Perhaps he read in her hesitation a confession of poverty, but he did not ask any more questions.

"I'll be back in a minute," he said presently and went out and when he returned he was heaving Atlas-like under the weight of a great log that had lain for days by the roadside.

"There," he said as he deposited it in the fireplace. "If you will take out them wild flowers we'll have a fire."

Miss Frazier obeyed weekly.

"How strong you are," she breathed. "Oh, law, yes," said the little man; "I kin lift most anything."

He made several trips after that, finding enough dry wood in the shed to start the fire, and soon it was roaring gloriously.

The black cat came and curled up on the hearth, looking at the flames with fathomless eyes.

"Oh, it's lovely, lovely!" said Miss Frazier. "It is like something alive."

"I allus did like a fire," said the little man. "I came from down south, and we don't think much of stores there. Not fer bein' sociable. You've got to see the flames to be real friendly."

"I am going to make you a cup of tea," Miss Frazier said heartily.

and when it was ready she brought it in on a dainty tray, flanked by half a dozen stale crackers. "I wish I had something nicer to offer," she said, "but it is so hard to get things."

The little man smiled, and as he took in the details of the poor room some knowledge of her plight seemed to come to him, and he found a way to help her.

"I bet you don't know what good things you kin cook over a fireplace," he said eagerly.

"I never heard of such a thing," she said. "What could I cook?"

"Well, Brunswick stew is fine. It's got squirrels and corn and onions and tomatoes. You jus' let me show you!"

"But I can't get those things!" Her face flamed.

"Of course you can't. 'Tain't to be expected that a woman kin kill a squirrel. But I'm goin' buntin' tomorrow, and I'll bring the things!"

He left her later, and when he had gone Miss Frazier stood for a long time looking into the glowing coals. "Oh, pussy cat, pussy cat," she said when at last the two of them were curled up for the night, "be uses dreadful grammar, but he is the kindest man I have ever knowed."

The little man came the next day and made the stew, and all that afternoon the savory food simmered and bubbled, and the black cat watched it with eager eyes. Miss Frazier in her best blue gown set the table for two, flitting from one room to the other with all the gaiety of a young girl.

The little man's table manners proved to be much better than his grammar, and it was at the end of the feast that he told Miss Frazier the story of his life, and as he talked his hostess weighed his dignity, his manliness, against his defects and found grammar losing its relative importance.

He came often after that, and the black cat learned to know his footstep and to meet him at the door and to curl up on his knee as he sat in front of the fireplace while the two good friends basked and chatted in the golden glow.

And then came the beginning of the new quarter and with it Miss Frazier's remittance.

"And next week I must go," she told the little man when he came that evening.

He looked at her calmly.

"You ain't goin'," he said.

Miss Frazier, thrilling at his masterfulness, asked faintly, "Why not?"

"Because I can't git along without you," said he. "I can't, Annabel."

"How did you know my first name?" Miss Frazier demanded.

"I seen it in one of your books," he said, "and it's a mighty pretty name."

Then he reached out and took her hands in his. "You're such a lonely little thing," he said, "and I jes' can't live without you. I think it's settin' around this heartstone that gave me the feelin' that I wanted to marry you. And you'll never want for nothin', honey, not so long as I kin give it."

With a little impulsive movement she slipped on her knees beside his chair and hid her face against the roughness of his coat. "I've been so lonely all my life," she sobbed.

"There, there, honey," he whispered, with his kindly hand against her cheek. "You ain't goin' to be lonesome any more." And with that vista of rest and peace and happiness poor, tired Miss Frazier was content.

"Fond"—Its Two Meanings.

The older meaning of this word was, as is well known, equivalent to foolish. Now it has the meaning of affectionate. The following instance of the use of the word in both senses on the same page of the same work marks the period of transition, when the old sense still lingered while the new sense was coming into use. In Dr. Watts on "The Improvement of the Mind," first edition, 1751, in chapter 15, section 5, on page 119, I find:

"Some are so fond to know a great deal at once and love to talk of things with freedom and boldness before they truly understand them that they scarcely ever allow themselves attention enough to search the matter through and through."

And lower down on the page, in section 7, is:

"A soul inspired with the fondest love of truth and the warmest aspirations after sincere felicity and celestial beatitude will keep all its powers attentive to the incessant pursuit of them."

Also in Coles' English-Latin Dictionary, fifteenth edition, 1749, both meanings are given as follows: "Fond, indulgent," and lower down, "Fond (foolish), stultus."—London Notes and Queries.

Singular Coincidence.

In 1884, just after Commodore Schley returned from rescuing the survivors of the Greely arctic expedition, the Massachusetts Humane society presented him with a handsome medal for his achievement, and Benjamin W. Crowninshield, one of the Bay State's great orators, was sent to Washington to make the presentation speech. On the way to the capital Mr. Crowninshield fell in with an old and prominent resident of Boston, who took the privilege of asking the orator what his mission in Washington was. In reply the old gentleman was shown the medal and told what was to be done with it.

"Strange coincidence," mused the venerable gentleman from the Hub. "Forty-four years ago, in 1840, I rode over this same line and met General Winfield Scott. I was as inquisitive then as now and asked him where he was going. He said that a son of his friend, Mr. Schley, had been named for him and that he was going to Maryland to see the baby. Nearly half a century is past, and now I find you going to Washington to carry a medal to the man that General Scott visited when the man was an infant."

As far as the eye could see stretched the limitless expanse of snow. Miss Frazier, peering from window to window of her little cottage, felt imprisoned.

"Oh, pussy cat, pussy cat," she said to the cat curled up on the window seat, "I shall die of loneliness."

The cat gave sleepy attention, and Miss Frazier shook her gently. "Of course you don't care," she said, "but who could have believed that snow and cold weather would have come so early! And all the other cottagers have gone back to town. But I can't. My rent is paid for six months, and I can't afford to lose it."

Once more she began her excited walk across the floor, while the cat went to sleep, and deadly quiet reigned. At last Miss Frazier could stand it no longer. She put on her hat and coat and a pair of rubbers. Pausing on the threshold as she went out, she addressed the cat theatrically.

"Sleep on," she said. "I go to seek my fortune." And she floundered through the snow to the gate.

The road, deep with drifts, offered new discouragements. Miss Frazier's long skirts dragged and grew heavy, and at last she stopped and sobbed aloud, "I can't go on!"

Help came in the person of a little man in high boots, who appeared from the other side of the drift.

"Got stuck, did ye?" he asked cheerily. "Well, you ought ter stayed at home. 'Tain't weather fer wimmin to be out."

Miss Frazier looked at him haughtily. In her code there was no place for bad grammar, and besides, as a spinster of spirit, his reproach grated on her. "Women can't stay in and die of loneliness," she told him stiffly.

The little man looked at her with sympathetic gray eyes. "Lonesome, was ye?" he said. "Well, now, that's too bad."

His sympathy warmed the cockles of Miss Frazier's heart. It was so long since any one had cared. The last of her family, she had taught school in a big city until ill health had forced her to resign. Then she had rented the little cottage at the unfashionable resort and had prepared to live there for six months, hoping for the benefits of fresh air and a free life. There had been other cottagers near, but they had their own interests, so that even in the warmer months Miss Frazier had been lonely, and now that snow had come her situation seemed unbearable.

There were tears in her eyes as she stood there, forlorn and cold in the drift, and the little man said again: "Well, now, that's too bad. You'd better git into the house. You'll ketch cold."

"I hate the house," said Miss Frazier fiercely. "There isn't a soul there but the pussy cat."

"I live up at the farm," he informed her. "I'm the new manager, and there ain't nobody there but a lot of men and a colored woman to cook for us. There's a good deal of work, you know."

Miss Frazier didn't know, but she found herself listening eagerly to his talk of Guernsey cattle and of blue ribbon horses, with all the rest of the homely farm details.

The little man helped her up the path and landed her on her own doorstep safely. In spite of the biting air he jerked his cap off as he bade her goodby.

"Come in," she urged. "Oh, please come in. I don't think I can stand it to face the pussy cat all alone."

His kindly blue eyes smiled at her. "I'd like to come," he said. "'Tain't very sociable up at the farm."

The little room was cheerless enough. Miss Frazier's ginger jars and Mexican hats had been artistic summer accessories, but in the gray light of the snowy day they merely served to emphasize the bleakness. In the stone fireplace was a bunch of goldenrod gone to seed. The only warmth came feebly from a rickety stove in the summer kitchen.

"Why ain't you got a fire in the fireplace?" the little man demanded as he surveyed the cavernous structure.

"I haven't any wood," shivered Miss Frazier. "I—I couldn't get any."

Perhaps he read in her hesitation a confession of poverty, but he did not ask any more questions.

"I'll be back in a minute," he said presently and went out, and when he returned he was bending at the knee under the weight of a great log that had lain for days by the roadside.

"Tl. re," he said as he deposited it in the fireplace. "If you will tie out them wild flowers we'll have a fire."

Miss Frazier looked at him.

"How strong you are!" she cried.

"Oh, law, yes," said the little man. "I ain't used to anything."

He made several trips after that, bringing enough dry sticks to build a start of a fire, and soon it was roaring merrily.

The black cat came and curled up on the hearth, looking at the flames with fathomless eyes.

"Oh, it's lovely, lovely!" said Miss Frazier. "It is like something alive."

"I ains' do like a fire!" said the little man. "I came from down south, and we don't think much of stores there. Not for help's sociable. You've got to see the flames to be real friendly."

"I am going to make you a cup of tea," Miss Frazier said dutifully.

and when it was ready she brought it in on a dainty tray, flanked by half a dozen stale crackers. "I wish I had something nicer to offer," she said, "but it is so hard to get things."

The little man smiled, and as he took in the details of the poor room some knowledge of her plight seemed to come to him, and he found a way to help her.

"I bet you don't know what good things you kin cook over a fireplace," he said eagerly.

"I never heard of such a thing," she said. "What could I cook?"

"Well, Brunswick stew is fine. It's got squirrels and corn and onions and tomatoes. You jus' let me show you!"

"But I can't get those things!" Her face flamed.

"Of course you can't. 'Tain't to be expected that a woman kin kill a squirrel. But I'm g'a'n huntin' tomorrow, and I'll bring the thilgins!"

He left her later, and when he had gone Miss Frazier stood for a long time looking into the glowing coals. "Oh, pussy cat, pussy cat," she said when at last the two of them were curled up for the night, "he uses dreadful grammar, but he is the kindest man I have ever known."

The little man came the next day and made the stew, and all that afternoon the savory food simmered and bubbled, and the black cat watched it with eager eyes. Miss Frazier in her best blue gown set the table for two, flitting from one room to the other with all the gayety of a young girl.

The little man's table manners proved to be much better than his grammar, and it was at the end of the feast that he told Miss Frazier the story of his life, and as he talked his hostess weighed his dignity, his manliness, against his defects and found grammar losing its relative importance.

He came often after that, and the black cat learned to know his footstep and to meet him at the door and to curl up on his knee as he sat in front of the fireplace while the two good friends basked and chatted in the golden glow.

And then came the beginning of the new quarter and with it Miss Frazier's remittance.

"And next week I must go," she told the little man when he came that evening.

He looked at her calmly.

"You ain't goin'," he said.

Miss Frazier, thrilling at his masterfulness, asked faintly, "Why not?"

"Because I can't git along without you," said he. "I can't, Annabel."

"How did you know my first name?" Miss Frazier demanded.

"I seen it in one of your books," he said, "and it's a mighty pretty name."

Then he reached out and took her hands in his. "You're such a lonely little thing," he said, "and I jes' can't live without you. I think it's settin' around this hearthstone that gave me the feelin' that I wanted to marry you. And you'll never want for nothin', honey, nor so long as I kin give it."

With a little impulsive movement, she slipped on her knees beside his chair and hid her face against the roughness of his coat. "I've been so lonely all my life," she sobbed.

"There, there, honey," he whispered, with his kindly hand against her cheek. "You ain't goin' to be lonesome any more." And with that vista of rest and peace and happiness poor, tired Miss Frazier was content.

"Fond"—Its Two Meanings.

The older meaning of this word was, as is well known, equivalent to foolish. Now it has the meaning of affectionate. The following instance of the use of the word in both senses on the same page of the same work marks the period of transition, when the old sense still lingered while the new sense was coming into use. In Dr. Watts on "The Improvement of the Mind," first edition, 1751, in chapter 15, section 5, on page 119, I find:

"Some are so fond to know a great deal at once and love to talk of things with freedom and boldness before they truly understand them that they scarcely ever allow themselves attention enough to search the matter through and through."

And lower down on the page, in section 7, is:

"A soul inspired with the fondest love of truth and the warmest aspirations after sincere felicity and celestial beatitude will keep all its powers attentive to the incessant pursuit of them."

Also in Coles' English-Latin Dictionary, fifteenth edition, 1749, both meanings are given as follows: "Fond, indulgent," and lower down, "Fond (foolish), stultus."—London Notes and Queries.

Singular Coincidence.

In 1884, just after Commodore Schley returned from rescuing the survivors of the Greely Arctic expedition, the Massachusetts Humane society presented him with a handsome medal for his achievement, and Benjamin W. Crowninshield, one of the Bay State's great orators, was sent to Washington to make the presentation speech. On the way to the capital Mr. Crowninshield fell in with an old and prominent resident of Boston, who took the privilege of asking the orator what his mission in Washington was. In reply the old gentleman was shown the medal and told what was to be done with it.

"Strange coincidence," mused the venerable gentleman from the Hub. "Forty-four years ago, in 1840, I received this same fine and most General Winslow Scott. I was as impetuous then as now and asked him where he was going. He said that a son of his friend, Mr. Sumner, had been named for him and that he was going to Maryland to see the baby. Nearly half a century is past, and now I find you going to Washington to carry a medal to the man that General Scott visited when the man was an infant!"

IRISHTOWNS OLD LADY PASSES
THE 97TH MILESTONE.A Husband Locked Up in Corn Crib to Sleep off a Flitting Boose—
Other County News.

A most remarkable lady is Mrs. Ginter, widow of the late Anthony Ginter, who makes her home with Mrs. Charles Kirtz at the upper end of Irishtown. Mrs. Ginter, who at this time is enjoying good health, passed the 97th milestone in life's journey on April 12th. She retains well all her faculties and bids fair to reach the century mark.

A Utah woman on a recent evening locked up her husband in the corn crib to sleep off a dose of boose. He had been to a flitting and indulged rather freely in hard cider and came home in the evening in a hilarious condition and his wife refused him admission to the house and led him out to the corn crib where he was left to snooze off his spree. He swore rather freely when he woke up chilly and sober the next morning.

The "Carlisle Herald" speaking of Dr. J. G. Stover, of Fairfield, says: "He is president of the Bendersville National Bank and one of Adams County's apple kings. He has 10,000 fruit trees and last year sold his crop in the orchard for $5,000 and has refused an offer of $75,000 for his fruit farm. He has bought a farm adjoining his and will this year plant 2,800 additional trees.

Rev. Dr. O. C. Roth, of Chambersburg, well known in this place, has his beard closely cropped and thereby hangs a tale. Dr. Roth attends to the furnace at his home. While firing it up the furnace became filled with gas. The front door was blown open and the fumes went into the face of the minister, singeing his whiskers and hair. Fortunately, we are glad to state, none of the fumes went into his eyes.

Cremate the Bugs Now.

Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist of Pennsylvania, calls attention of gardeners, farmers and orchardists, at this time of year to the importance of raking together and burning all possible rubbish on the place, not only for the purpose of a general spring cleaning, but also to get rid of various pests which hibernated or passed the winter protected by such material.

Certain insects such as the adults of the Asparagus Beetle, the large Squash Bug, and others pass the winter in any rubbish where they can find protection, being found especially in the garden and in or near fragments of plants which they infested. Absolutely clean farming is recognized as being fully as important in controlling certain species of insects, as is the use of the spray pump. The destruction of such insects as those above mentioned before they come from their winter quarters, and can so easily be killed by burning the rubbish that has given them winter protection, is strongly urged at just this particular time.

In burning any material it is advisable to do this on cultivated ground rather than upon a waste plot for the purpose of getting the benefit of the ashes as a valuable fertilizer to the soil. All ashes contain more or less potash of lime, and these are among essential elements of plant food. Thus in burning rubbish piles the gardener is not only destroying certain pests which might later cause him considerable damage, but is also enriching his soil and burning out certain weed seeds that can likewise be destroyed by the heating of the soil at the place where the fire is built.

PRIMARY CHANGES.

Saturday, September 9, will be last day for candidates to file petitions for their names to be placed upon ballots of the several parties at the primary election to be held in Adams County on Saturday, September 30. The bill changing the date from June has been signed by Governor Tener.

The new law provides that candidates for all offices to be filed at the municipal election held in the odd numbered years shall be nominated at the Fall primary. All ward, borough and township officials whose terms under the old law would have expired this spring have their terms lengthened until after the fall election and candidates for all such offices whose terms would have expired this year must be nominated at the Fall primary.

This does not include however County Committeemen. The present Democratic committee will continue as such until after the primary of next year, and hereafter under the law committeemen will be elected in every even numbered year for a term of two years. The new law provides that such party officers as are provided for by the rules of the several political parties shall be elected at the Spring primary and this primary is only held in even numbered years.

TERMS LENGTHENED.

In our last issue mention was made of the circular letter of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, the Hon. Robert McAfee, that all borough and township officers elected in 1909 for a term of three years would have their terms lengthened from the spring of 1912 until after the November election of 1913.

The officials in Gettysburg who will have their terms so lengthened and covering the great celebration of the 50th Anniversary of the Battle are as follows:

Burgess, J. A. Holtzworth.
Tax collector, Wm. H. Frock.
Auditor, Preston Tate.
Councilmen, Wm. D. Armor, Geo. Shearer and J. A. Tawney.
School Directors, Edw. M. Bender and Frank Mumper.

These officials were elected in Feb. 1909, and will serve until after Nov. 1913.

Adam.
Adam had no drug store on the corner he could walk to;
Adam had no telephone, and no friends he could talk to;
Adam had no gas jets in his house, nor meter humming,
And he had no house at all where people could be coming.

Adam had no relatives to come upon a visit—
If you'd mention "visit" to him he'd have asked "What is it?"
But he did not have you there that little word to mention,
And he hadn't any mail demanding his attention.

Adam never got a post card nor received a letter,
Adam never called himself a creditor or debtor.
Adam knew nobody who could take the time to write him,
Adam thus missed politics and folk who fain would fight him,

Adam had no enemies, he did not own an auto,
Had no roads to ride upon at speeds which he ought not to,
Had no courts to fine him if he struck a gait unlawful,
Had no breakfast food, nor buckwheat cake, nor even waffle.

Adam had no servant woes to fill his life with trouble,
Had no stuff to drown his woes and make his vision double,
Had no clubs, or matinees, or books or daily papers,
That would run his picture in when he cut foolish capers.

Adam had no money, and he had no place to spend it;
Even if he'd had the coin, he had no chance to lend it,
Hand no cash, or in his pockets he'd have had to hold it;
Adam had no trousers to have pockets—there, we've told it!

Adam did not have a thing that we have round us daily.
Didn't even know what day or month was passing gaily;
Adam hadn't any culture—was an ignoramus—
Isn't it quite wonderful that Adam is so famous?

—Wilbur D. Nesbit in Chicago Post.

Without Fear of Successful Contradiction, We Claim that the Ostermoor : Mattress : $15.00

is Better than all Others for these very Pertinent Reasons:

Most Comfortable bed ever slept on—soft, yielding, but springs and resilient—never packs or gets lumpy, or loses its feeling of newness. That is because it is made of Ostermoor sheets; built, not stuffed. We have scores of letters from doctors and competent judges who declare it the only

Absolutely sanitary mattress because dust cannot work into it; no vermin can harbor in it; a sun-bath is all the renovating it ever needs; it will not absorb dampness, disease germs, or any poison from perspiration or the atmosphere. It is always

Perfectly Dry because non-absorbent. If the ticking is dry, the mattress is dry. No taking cold from it, no unpleasant or musty odor about it; always fresh and sweet. Testimonials in our free book bear witness for those who have used it for thirty years or more and who do not hesitate to say that it Lasts a Life-time and stays in perfect condition. It never needs remaking or renovating. You may remove and clean the tick as often as you like.

No other mattress in the world, of any material, at any price, from any maker or through any dealer, can truthfully make and prove all the claims as can the Ostermoor. Do not take our word for it—our word is good—but if you will the proof is there from U. S. Government tests and reports, letters from prominent men and women and the testimony of schools, hotels, hospitals and steamships where extraordinary service is required.

The book is handsome as well as convincing; contains over 200 illustrations—about beds of all ages about sleep, its lack (insomnia); about mattress-hair—some things will be surprising and you will wish you had known them long ago. Of course, it also explains the merits and styles of Ostermoor Mattresses, Church cushions, etc. This book costs you a post card; don't you wish a copy? What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid rising in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attached under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medicinal forest plants. RECORD YOUR DEEDS

By an Act of Assembly of 1893, "All Deeds and Conveyances shall be recorded within ninety days after their execution or shall be adjudged fraudulent and void against subsequent purchasers."

Also the Act of Assembly of 1909, prescribes a short form of Deeds, and "again requires the recording to make them valid."

It is also a great protection against loss or deed being burned by having them recorded, and costs but a small sum, compared to getting a new deed. Bring or send them into the Recorder's office, and in a few days they will be returned to you.

Lost Jobs at Washington.

As previously told the Democratic House upon the convening of the 62nd Congress lopped off positions calling for an outlay of $128,580 and Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer is turning the light on the placement created by Republican extravagance.

Some of the places made vacant are those of the thirty-eight extra policemen appointed during the Spanish war to prevent Spanish spies from blowing up the capitol. Two telegraph operators who had long survived their usefulness in fact ever since the telephone took away their instruments and their occupation but still they lingered on till now. The clerks in a phantom document department, abolished in 1895, had so "got the habit" of appearing on Uncle Sam's payroll that they shed tears when they said good-bye.

The house librarians of a library long since moved away to other quarters, had become so wedded to their jobs that the divorce seemed shocking. It was like the slaughter of the innocents to deprive that thirteen year old child of her $1200 position of "clerk to the door-keeper," pity 'twas that the door-keeper had no other daughters to hold down similar places, the poor child must have been lonesome.

Similar positions under the speaker will be pruned away saving $2,320, the clerk will sacrifice patriots worth $39,970, the sergeant-at-arms $47,050, the door-keeper $31,300 while six committees that were not absolutely necessary to the well being of the country are released from their duties at $12,000. Then the "extra month's pay," that comes in so handy about vacation time, has to go.

The Democrats are proceeding upon the principle that everyone who works for the government must earn his pay; that the taxpayers' money is not to be poured out recklessly as from a horn of plenty—that the ninety million consumers in this country are entitled to consideration. The idea is revolutionary, and causes as much amazement in Washington as the proposition of tariff legislation in the interest of the people is causing among the protected interests which regard the tariff as their own machine for extracting profits from the masses.

35 New Engines on W. M. R. R.

The Western Maryland Railway Company has just awarded a contract for new motive power involving an expenditure of over $700,000. The contract calls for 35 locomotives, which will be ready for delivery about the time that the new Cumberland extension is completed and placed in service in the fall. The Baldwin Locomotive Works is to build five Mallet engines for the Western Maryland, while the contract for 30 consolidation engines was let to the American Locomotive Works. The order is one of the largest that has been placed for some time by the Western Maryland.

BUSH LEAVES W. M. R. R. CO.

TO BECOME PRESIDENT OF MISSOURI PACIFIC AT $100,000.

General Manager Alexander Robertson to be New President of W. M. R. R.

Although recently forced out of the position himself, George J. Gould, opposing the Rockefeller-Kuhn-Loeb interests, brought about the election last week of H. F. Bush, president of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, as his successor as president of the Missouri Pacific Railway, defeating the opposition candidate, David R. Francis, former Governor of Missouri.

The victory of the Gould faction was followed immediately by the announcement of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.'s withdrawal as bankers for the system and with the resignation of Paul M. Warburg, the company's representative on the board of directors, and of Cornelius Vanderbilt, an ally. Edgar L. Marston, representing Blair & Co.; Fred T. Gates, representing John D. Rockefeller, and E. D. Adams, American representative of the Deutsche Bank, voted against Mr. Bush, but did not sever their connection with the board. It is rumored, however, that Messrs. Adams and Marston also will resign.

Statements by Both Sides.

After the meeting both George Gould and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. issued statements explaining their side of the case. Mr. Gould regretting personally the withdrawal of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., but congratulating the road on the selection of Mr. Bush. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., on the other hand, explained that they did not favor Mr. Bush and that because of his election Messrs. Warburg and Vanderbilt felt "unwilling to share responsibility in the management of the company under these circumstances."

Mr. Gould in his statement says: "The board has, I think, made a wise choice in selecting Mr. B. F. Bush as president. He is familiar with the conditions on the line and with the affairs of the company, gained while in its employ some years ago. I was much influenced in my advocacy of his election by the results he has attained in his administration of the Western Maryland property and by the esteem in which I knew he was held by Mr. Rockefeller, who is so largely interested in the Western Maryland, and who, next to our family, is the largest stockholder in Missouri Pacific."

It is understood that Mr. Bush will receive a salary of $100,000 a year—more than three times the amount he is now receiving as president of the Western Maryland.

Mr. Robertson Slated.

There is little doubt that Vice-President and General Manager Alexander Robertson, of the Western Maryland, will be elected president of that road to succeed Mr. Bush. In addition to continuing in his present position as general manager, at the meeting of the Western Maryland next Tuesday.

In view of the extension now being completed by the Western Maryland to Conellsville, where it will join the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, and the traffic agreement with the New York Central system, which will go into effect on the completion of that link, it is highly important to have at the helm of the Western Maryland one who is thoroughly familiar with its present problems.

"There is only one regret I have in accepting the presidency of the Missouri Pacific," said Mr. Bush, that I will have to leave Baltimore. I know of no other city in which I have been so happy, and in this I know I voice the sentiments of Mrs. Bush.

"I plan to take up my new duties about May 1 and will probably leave Baltimore the end of this or early next week. I will be in St. Louis from then on, and I suppose I'll be kept rather busy. I believe I am leaving the Western Maryland in excellent condition and with a prospect for its future which, I may say, with modesty, if it be permitted, has never been surpassed."

"We have kept very quiet about our work with the property. You know I don't believe a great deal in talking much about business affairs and perhaps Baltimoreans don't appreciate what a tremendous future the Western Maryland will bring them. As soon as the connection is completed with the New York Central it will give Baltimore another trans-continental line with great outlets and touching on important points. The New York Central, as everyone knows, is a great and important property, and the future that this road will give to Baltimore is almost incomprehensible. Baltimore, you know, has only one real trans-continental road, the Baltimore and Ohio, and the Western Maryland will soon develop to that point where it is quite as important to the city, if not more so, than the Baltimore and Ohio."

Famous Graffenburg Inn.

The famous Graffenburg Inn is to undergo extensive repairs and improvements, the most notable of which will be enlarged and improved. dozen feet width extending the full length of the eastern gable. This piazza will connect with the present porch on the southern front of the Inn and will prove one of the most attractive summer features of the house. It will be of colonial design, conforming with the existing architecture of the building now standing on a site for hotel purposes for over a century past. Other features of the historic Inn will be enlarged and improved.

A 50-cent bottle of

given in half-teaspoon doses four times a day, mixed in its bottle, will last a year-old baby nearly a month, and four bottles over three months, and will make the baby strong and well and will lay the foundation for a healthy, robust boy or girl.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS

Send 10c., name of paper and this ad. for our beautiful Savings Bank and Child's Sketch-Book. Each bank contains a Good Luck Penny.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, N. Y.

Workmen are now engaged in repairing and repainting some of the bedrooms and improving the bathrooms. The office will have further changes made in its furnishings and its outer door as well as the front door of the hall will have lighted panels, of colonial design, added.

A garage will be erected near the stable for the accommodation of automobiles and a gasoline station established.

When Forestry Commissioner Conklin visited the inn a few days ago he authorized these improvements. The commissioner realizes the importance of this inn as one of our historic connections with the past as well as one of great interest and convenience to the mountain visitor from town or city and especially to automobilists and is generous, so far as the limited state appropriation will admit, in making such improvements as well add to its convenience to the public and its preservation.

Haag Show Coming With Clowns.

While the thrilling aerial and arenic acts as well as sensational equestrianism and hippodrome track events are absolutely essential to all big tented shows, their performances would fall flat were it not for the clowns. Primarily the majority of show going enthusiasts, not to mention the small boys and girls, visit the canvas cities to be amused and the salaried jesters must see to it that none are disappointed. Realizing that a goodly share of the success of the entertainment depends upon the funsters, the mighty Haag shows, which give afternoon and evening performances May 17th in Gettysburg, engaged for this season as unparalleled a quota of world-famous clowns as money can hire.

There is a veritable army of those jolly fellows, whose sole work is to provide wholesome laughs and amusement for all classes and all ages. From the time the main tent doors are open, which is an hour before the first act enters the rings, until the end of the program, the great hippodrome track swarms with harlequines, and mirth reigns fast and furious.

The Katzenjammer Kids, Buster Brown, Simple Simon, and the Billiken, those together with all the other comic supplement characters are there as well as more than a score of others. If you do not wish to enjoy hale and hearty jollity, it will be advisable to remain away from the mighty Haag shows. On the other hand if you are suffering from an attack of the blues, a certain and permanent cure is assured if you attend the performance.

Split Log Drag.

When the frost is coming out of the ground in the spring is one of the best periods of the entire year for an effective use of the split log drag on the earth roads. Its use will not be timed by a previous rain as in the requirement of summer dragging but any day when the roads thaw out presents an opportunity for satisfactory work with the drag. Roads dragged in the early spring will be the first to take form. The crown given the road will assist the road in ridding itself of the moisture it contains and the early dragging will more easily obliterate the deep wagon-racking ruts which have formed during the winter, with its alternate freezing and thawing.

The liberal use of the drag now will show its good effects in mid-summer. It will result in a reduction of mud in wet weather, the road having opportunities for shedding water. Dust is dry mud disintegrated and anything that will operate to reduce the amount of mud will likewise result in a dust reduction. The split log drag and its economical maintenance of the earth road is no longer an experiment. It has been accepted by United States office of public roads and state highway departments, and state legislatures have passed acts compelling its use.

Full information on its construction and use can be found in Farmers Bulletin, No. 321, which will be sent free for the asking by the United States department of agriculture, or by Congressman Lafean.

When the split log drag is being successfully used all over the country, why are they not used in Adams county?

PENNSYLVANIA DEMOCRACY

LETTER OF STATE CHAIRMAN GUTHRIE ON REORGANIZATION.

Pointing the Way to Needed Changes in Rules to Make Democracy a Power in the State.

Democratic State Chairman Geo. W. Guthrie has addressed the following letter to members of the State Central Committee and through them to the Democracy of the State.

You have no doubt received from the Special Committee notice of my election by it as Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and of my acceptance.

I have appointed James I. Blakeslee, Esq., Secretary, who has agreed to act without any salary and will give his time to the full performance of the duties of that office. Mr. Blakeslee will, as rapidly as possible, put himself in communication either in person or by letter with the members of the Committee and the officers of the various local organizations, and with active Democrats in the various districts. I have also appointed Warren Van Dyke, Esq., Resident Secretary, who will take charge of the Headquarters.

To enable the party to carry on its work and meet the proper and necessary expenses, without being dependent on large contributions from one or two men who claim as a return the right to dictate its actions, the Reorganization Committee has been continued and will undertake at once the duty imposed upon it of raising the necessary amount by small contributions from any who are willing to give to the cause.

I am glad to inform you that they have strong assurances that their appeals will be favorably responded to and that the party will be placed in a position of independence and self-respect.

While it is the intention of the officers to keep in close touch with the members of the State Central Committee and the members of the party in every section of the State so as to be ready and able to aid the local organizations when possible, I again assure you that there will be no attempt to interfere with them or to commit the party in advance to any course of action. The selection of policies and candidates belongs not to the organization, but to the party and must be left to the free will of its members, untrammelled by dictation from any source.

I believe that one great cause of dissatisfaction in the past has been the feeling that party action instead of reflecting the free choice of its members, simply registered the arbitrary decisions of self-constituted leaders, who determined in advance the policies to be adopted and candidates to be nominated. This practice must no longer prevail. In order to restore confidence and to reunite the party, its members must be satisfied that not the will of any man or faction, but the collected will of all will prevail in controlling the party's action.

In order to make the party more promptly and surely responsive to the will of its members and also to meet recent changes in the election laws of the State, some changes in our party rules are necessary.

For these purposes I would suggest for your consideration the following as the most pressing:

1st. As far as possible the rules governing the election of members of the State Central Committee should be uniform and in accordance with the policy underlying the primary election law. So long as radical differences between the different counties remain, entire equality cannot exist.

2nd. Whenever a Congressional District is composed of two or more counties, there should be a chairman for such district, to be selected either by direct vote at the primaries, or by the Congressional Candidate in conjunction with the chairman of the counties comprising the district. Such District Chairman should have charge of the congressional campaign in such district.

3rd. The State Chairman shall enter upon the discharge of his duties immediately after his election and shall serve only until his successor has been elected. In any year when a state convention is held, he shall not be elected until after such convention, and the nominees thereof shall have a voice and vote in the selection.

Under the present system, as you know the new Chairman, although elected in July, does not take office until the January following, and therefore has nothing to do with the campaign following his election. This is manifestly unfair.

Every fair-minded man should admit that when the people, through primaries and conventions, have selected new committees and new candidates, and have perhaps adopted new policies to meet new issues, the new committeemen coming fresh from the people, should be able to select as their chairman one who they know is in entire sympathy with them, and in whom they and the candidates will have entire confidence. Sometimes they might re-elect the old chairman, but on the other hand, it might happen again as it has before, that the old chairman represented influences to which they were opposed and from which the party desired to be free; yet under the present rule, they would be obliged to accept him as their leader in the campaign on which they were entering.

No supposed convenience can justify such a system. Its only real purpose is to provide a device for perpetuating the control of a faction even though the people should elect a convention hostile to it.

4th. The State Chairman, the Chairman of the Convention, and the candidates nominated at it should have authority to appoint an advisory committee to supervise the State campaign.

This was the system which prevailed when the Democratic party was a vital and growing force in the State. It will give to the people through the convention a more direct connection with an control over the State campaign, as the majority in the convention will be able to inject its own spirit and purposes into the campaign.

These suggestions are made for your consideration; they are intended to restore confidence and increase the liberty of party action. I will be glad to hear from you on these or any other points which you think should be considered.

Of course, all such suggestions must be of any avail, be submitted to and approved by the full committee, the State Convention, and the party.

There are other provisions in the rules which should be changed in order to increase the control of the party over the organization; it is also probable that if the so-called "Tustin Act" goes into effect, still other changes will be necessary to comply with its provisions.

In ample time for your consideration and action, attention will be called to these points.

I am, very truly yours,
GEO. W. GUTHRIE,
Chairman.

ALL OVER THE COUNTY

IRISH TOWNS OLD LADY PASSES THE 97TH MILESTONE.

A Husband Locked Up in Corn Crib to Sleep off a Flitting Boose—Other County News.

A most remarkable lady is Mrs. Ginter, widow of the late Anthony Ginter, who makes her home with Mrs. Charles Kurtz at the upper end of Irishtown. Mrs. Ginter, who at this time is enjoying good health, passed the 97th milestone in life's journey on April 12th. She retains well all her faculties and bids fair to reach the century mark.

A Irish woman on a recent evening locked up her husband in the corn crib to sleep off a dose of boose. He had been to a flitting and indulged rather freely in hard cider and came home in the evening in a hilarious condition and his wife refused him admission to the house and led him out to the corn crib where he was left to snooze off his spree. He swore rather freely when he woke up chilly and sober the next morning.

Eleven shares of the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank of New Oxford recently sold as follows: Harry Flesham 2 shares at $103; C. C. Stough 3 shares at $102; J. C. Geiselman 3 shares at $102; F. M. Miller 2 shares at $102.50 and 1 at $102.

The "Carlisle Herald" speaking of Dr. J. G. Stover, of Fairfield, says: "He is president of the Bendersville National Bank and one of Adams County's apple kings. He has 10,000 fruit trees and last year sold his crop in the orchard for $5,000 and has refused an offer of $75,000 for his fruit farm. He has bought a farm adjoining his and will this year plant 2,900 additional trees.

Rev. Dr. O. C. Roth, of Chambersburg, well known in this place, has his beard closely cropped and thereby hangs a tale. Dr. Roth attends to the furnace at his home. While firing it up the furnace became filled with gas. The front door was blown open and the fumes went into the face of the minister, singeing his whiskers and hair. Fortunately, we are glad to state, none of the fumes went into his eyes.

Cremate the Bugs Now.

Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist of Pennsylvania, calls attention of gardeners, farmers and orchardists, at this time of year to the importance of raking together and burning all possible rubbish on the place, not only for the purpose of a general spring cleaning, but also to get rid of various pests which hibernated or passed the winter protected by such material. Certain insects such as the adults of the Asparagus Beetle, the large Squash Bug, and others pass the winter in any rubbish where they can find protection, being found especially in the garden and in or near fragments of plants which they infested. Absolutely clean farming is recognized as being fully as important in controlling certain species of insects, as is the use of the spray pump. The destruction of such insects as those above mentioned before they come from their winter quarters, and can so easily be killed by burning the rubbish that has given them winter protection, is strongly urged at just this particular time.

In burning any material it is advisable to do this on cultivated ground rather than upon a waste plot for the purpose of getting the benefit of the ashes as a valuable fertilizer to the soil. All ashes contain more or less potash of lime, and these are among essential elements of plant food. Thus in burning rubbish piles the gardener is not only destroying certain pests which might later cause him considerable damage, but is also enriching his soil and burning out certain weed seeds that can likewise be destroyed by the heating of the soil at the place where the fire is built.

THE PROPER COURSE.

Information of Priceless Value to Every Gettysburg Citizen.

How to act in an emergency is knowledge of inestimable worth, and this is particularly true of the diseases and ills of the human body. If you suffer with backache, urinary disorders, or any form of kidney trouble, the advice contained in the following statement will add a valuable asset to your store of knowledge. What could be more convincing proof of the efficiency of Doan's Kidney Pills than the statement of Gettysburg citizens who have been permanently cured?

Mrs. Elizabeth Beidler, 1 Steinwehr avenue, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I am just as willing to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills today as I was two years ago when I publicly told my experience with them. I was afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble and all my efforts for relief were unavailing. The kidney secretions passed irregularly and caused much distress. Pains often shot across my body and my health was all run down. Hearing so much about Doan's Kidney Pills, I was led to get a box at the Peoples' Drug Store and give them a trial. They cured me and I have since enjoyed good health."

The STONE FIREPLACE

By TEMPLE BAILEY
[Copyrighted, 1908, by Homer Sprague]

As far as the eye could see stretched the limitless expanse of snow. Miss Frazier, peering from window to window of her little cottage, felt imprisoned.

"Oh, pussy cat, pussy cat," she said to the cat curled up on the window seat, "I shall die of loneliness."

The cat gave sleepy attention, and Miss Frazier shook her gently. "Of course you don't care," she said, "but who could have believed that snow and cold weather would have come so early! And all the other cottagers have gone back to town. But I can't. My rent is paid for six months, and I can't afford to lose it."

Once more she began her excited walk across the floor, while the cat went to sleep, and deadly quiet reigned. At last Miss Frazier could stand it no longer. She put on her hat and coat and a pair of rubbers. Pausing on the threshold as she went out, she addressed the cat theatrically.

"Sleep on," she said. "I go to seek my fortune." And she floundered through the snow to the gate.

The road, deep with drifts, offered new discouragements. Miss Frazier's long skirts dragged and grew heavy, and at last she stopped and sobbed aloud, "I can't go on!"

Help came in the person of a little man in high boots, who appeared from the other side of the drift.

"Got stuck, did ye?" he asked cheerily. "Well, you ought ter stayed at home. 'Tain't weather fer wimmin to be out."

Miss Frazier looked at him haughtily. In her code there was no place for bad grammar, and besides, as a spinster of spirit, his reproach grated on her. "Women can't stay in and die of loneliness," she told him stiffly.

The little man looked at her with sympathetic gray eyes. "Lonesome, was ye?" he said. "Well, now, that's too bad."

His sympathy warmed the cockles of Miss Frazier's heart. It was so long since any one had cared. The last of her family, she had taught school in a big city until ill health had forced her to resign. Then she had rented the little cottage at the unfashionable resort and had prepared to live there for six months, hoping for the benefits of fresh air and a free life. There had been other cottagers near, but they had their own interests, so that even in the warmer months Miss Frazier had been lonely, and now that snow had come her situation seemed unbearable.

There were tears in her eyes as she stood there, forlorn and cold in the drift, and the little man said again: "Well, now, that's too bad. You'd better get into the house. You'll catch cold."

"I hate the house," said Miss Frazier fiercely. "There isn't a soul there but the pussy cat."

"I live up at the farm," he informed her. "I'm the new manager, and there ain't nobody there but a lot of men and a colored woman to cook for us. There's a good deal of work, you know."

Miss Frazier didn't know, but she found herself listening eagerly to his talk of Guernsey cattle and of blue ribbon horses, with all the rest of the homely farm details.

The little man helped her up the path and landed her on her own doorstep safely. In spite of the biting air he jerked his cap off as he bade her goodby.

"Come in," she urged. "Oh, please come in. I don't think I can stand it to face the pussy cat all alone."

His kindly blue eyes smiled at her. "I'd like to come," he said. "'Tain't very sociable up at the farm."

The little room was cheerless enough. Miss Frazier's ginger jars and Mexican hats had been artistic summer accessories, but in the gray light of the snowy day they merely served to emphasize the bleakness. In the stone fireplace was a bunch of goldenrod gone to seed. The only warmth came feebly from a rickety stove in the summer kitchen.

"Why ain't you got a fire in the fireplace?" the little man demanded as he surveyed the cavernous structure.

"I haven't any wood," shivered Miss Frazier. "I-I couldn't get any."

Perhaps he read in her hesitation a confession of poverty, but he did not ask any more questions.

"I'll be back in a minute," he said presently and went out, and when he returned he was bending Atlas-like under the weight of a great log that had lain for days by the roadside.

"There," he said as he deposited it in the fireplace, "if you will take out them wild flowers we'll have a fire."

Miss Frazier obeyed meekly. "How strong you are," she breathed. "Oh, law, yes," said the little man; "I kin lift most anything."

He made several trips after that, finding enough dry wood in the sled to start the fire, and soon it was roaring gloriously.

The black cat came and curled up on the hearth, looking at the flames with fathomless eyes.

"Oh, it's lovely, lovely!" said Miss Frazier. "It is like something alive."

"I allus did like a fire," said the little man. "I came from down south, and we don't think much of stoves there. Not fer bein' sociable. You've got to see the flames to be real friendly."

"I am going to make you a cup of tea," Miss Frazier said flutteringly.

and when it was ready she brought it in on a dainty tray, flanked by half a dozen stale crackers. "I wish I had something nicer to offer," she said, "but it is so hard to get things."

The little man smiled, and as he took in the details of the poor room some knowledge of her plight seemed to come to him, and he found a way to help her.

"I bet you don't know what good things you kin cook over a fireplace," he said eagerly.

"I never heard of such a thing," she said. "What could I cook?"

"Well, Brunswick stew is fine. It's got squirrels and corn and onions and tomatoes. You just let me show you."

"But I can't get those things"—Her face flamed.

"Of course you can't. 'Tain't to be expected that a woman kin kill a squirrel. But I'm g'on' huntin' tomorrow, and I'll bring the things."

He left her later, and when he had gone Miss Frazier stood for a long time looking into the glowing coals. "Oh, pussy cat, pussy cat," she said when at last the two of them were curled up for the night, "he uses dreadful grammar, but he is the kindest man I have ever known."

The little man came the next day and made the stew, and all that afternoon the savory food simmered and bubbled, and the black cat watched it with eager eyes. Miss Frazier in her best blue gown set the table for two, sitting from one room to the other with all the gaiety of a young girl.

The little man's table manners proved to be much better than his grammar, and it was at the end of the feast that he told Miss Frazier the story of his life, and as he talked his hostess weighed his defects and found grammar losing its relative importance.

He came often after that, and the black cat learned to know his footsteps and to meet him at the door and to curl up on his knee as he sat in front of the fireplace while the two good friends basked and chatted in the golden glow.

And then came the beginning of the new quarter and with it Miss Frazier's remittance.

"And next week I must go," she told the little man when he came that evening.

He looked at her calmly.

"You ain't goin'," he said.

Miss Frazier, thrilling at his masterfulness, asked faintly, "Why not?"

"Because I can't git along without you," said he. "I can't, Annabel."

"How did you know my first name?" Miss Frazier demanded.

"I seen it in one of your books," he said, "and it's a mighty pretty name."

Then he reached out and took her hands in his. "You're such a lonely little thing," he said, "and I jes' can't live without you. I think it's settin' around this hearthstone that gave me the feelin' that I wanted to marry you. And you'll never want for nothin', honey, not so long as I kin give it."

With a little impulsive movement, she slipped on her knees beside his chair and hid her face against the roughness of his coat. "I've been so lonely all my life," she sobbed.

"There, there, honey," he whispered, with his kindly hand against her cheek. "You ain't goin' to be lonesome any more." And with that vista of rest and peace and happiness poor, tired Miss Frazier was content.

"Fond"—Its Two Meanings.

The older meaning of this word was, as is well known, equivalent to foolish. Now it has the meaning of affectionate. The following instance of the use of the word in both senses on the same page of the same work marks the period of transition, when the old sense still lingered while the new sense was coming into use. In Dr. Watts on "The Improvement of the Mind," first edition, 1751, in chapter 15, section 5, on page 119, I find:

"Some are so fond to know a great deal at once and love to talk of things with freedom and boldness before they truly understand them that they scarcely ever allow themselves attention enough to search the matter through and through."

And lower down on the page, in section 7, is:

"A soul inspired with the fondest love of truth and the warmest aspirations after sincere felicity and celestial beatitude will keep all its powers attentive to the incessant pursuit of them."

Also in Coles' English-Latin Dictionary, fifteenth edition, 1749, both meanings are given as follows: "Fond, indulgent," and lower down, "Fond (foolish), stultus."—London Notes and Queries.

Singular Coincidence.

In 1884, just after Commodore Schley returned from rescuing the survivors of the Greely Arctic expedition, the Massachusetts Humane society presented him with a handsome medal for his achievement, and Benjamin W. Crowninfield, one of the Bay State's great orators, was sent to Washington to make the presentation speech. On the way to the capital Mr. Crowninfield fell in with an old and prominent resident of Boston, who took the privilege of asking the orator what his mission in Washington was. In reply the old gentleman was shown the medal and told what was to be done with it.

"Strange coincidence," mused the venerable gentleman from the Hub. "Forty-four years ago, in 1840, I rode over this same line and met General Winfield Scott. I was as inquisitive then as now and asked him where he was going. He said that a son of his friend, Mr. Schley, had been named for him and that he was going to Maryland to see the baby. Nearly half a century is past, and now I find you going to Washington to carry a medal to the man that General Scott visited when the man was an infant."

Suicide of Unknown Man.

The body of unknown man was found by Frank Miller of East Berlin in the big Conewago Creek at Kuhn's wood at the edge of that town. He was fishing when he came on body. The body had been in water for several weeks, and was in deep mud with only a portion of head above water. The face and nostrils were covered with mud indicating that the body had come to surface after lying upon bottom of stream.

The dead man appeared to be about 40 years of age, with black hair, sandy mustache, and weighing 170 lbs. He was well dressed and wore a pair of "Regal" shoes and on the inside of coat was a tag, "Baltimore One-Price Clothing Store, Harrisburg, Pa." $9.37 was found in pockets of clothes, a bunch of keys and a torn envelope with part of an address "David, National Military, Ohio." Rural Carrier C. E. Winand recalled seeing a man answering the above description about three weeks before on bridge crossing creek more than a mile above point where body was found.

Coroner Dr. G. E. Spatz of Hampton was notified of finding of body and held an inquest, empaneling as a jury Dr. Eugene Elgin, Rev. H. W. Miller, Rural Carrier Bosserman, Charles Butt, H. E. Senff and Isaac Miller and the report was made that "the death of the unknown man was due to drowning in a manner unknown to the jury." There was no evidence of foul play.

Steward C. F. Sheely of the County Home took charge of the body Wednesday evening, and on Thursday the body was interred in the graveyard at the County Home, no identification having been made.

Old Crime Recalled.

One of the later crimes to be treated in "The North American's" series of "Pennsylvania's Greatest Criminal Mysteries" is the murder of Christian Ranck, of Paradise township, Lancaster county.

Ranck was shot by some person hidden in the cellar of his home. Some small tracks, which might have been those of a woman, were found in the snow the next morning.

Many arrests were made, but no evidence could be found against those persons who were taken into custody, and all of them, they being mostly tramps, were released.

One romantic feature of this crime mystery is that the murder was committed on Christmas eve and that all the surroundings of a happy holiday scene accompanied the frightful tragedy.

The North American is printing one of these Pennsylvania mysteries every Sunday. All of them appear to be interesting to general readers, as well as criminal lawyers, and are certainly worthy of preservation as chapters of criminal history of the state.

This story will appear in the Sunday North American, April 30, 1911.

Gifts to High School.

On last Friday afternoon the Senior Class of Gettysburg High School presented to the School two fine plaster of paris busts of Washington and Lincoln. The busts on either side of the main room add greatly to the appearance of room. The Seniors bought them from proceeds of play "Among the Breakers." Ernie Ziegler, president of class presented the busts and Prof. W. A. Burgoon received them, the unveiling being done by Miss Olive Hoke and Miss Mary Sheeds.

The Palm Society presented the last entertainment of the year, an interesting program of recitations.

An interesting feature was the exhibition of art work by the pupils of first three years. This excellent work of the scholars was done under the instruction of Miss Annie Hake and work showing interior decorations, charcoal work from casts, copies, and color work was remarkable in view of the short time the pupils have been given the advantage of this course. This work deserves the encouragement of directors and all interested in the welfare of our schools.

—Miss Annie Diehl has returned to Gettysburg after spending the winter in Missouri.
